The work of if the diocese is divided. He would not ask for division because it would lighten the labors of the bishop personally, but because he thought that if there were two dioceses in place of one each bishop could do better work for God and for the church than one can do now with such a large territory under his charge. The work of the diocese has materially increased since the days of Bishop Whittingham, and even since the days of Bishop Pinkney. Still, if it is the will of the convention that the diocese be not divided he would still continue to do the best work he could for the charge intrusted to his keeping. It was the general welfare of the church and the advancement of its work that they were all advancement of its work that they were all seeking, and not the personal comfort of the bishop. As for himself, he would say frankly that he thought that ten years hence church life would be much stronger in each diocese if a division were made.

When the subject of division was first brought up, the bishop said, he had stated that he would never give his consent, as required by the law of the church, unless he was satisfied as to the proposed settlement of two most important matters. The division must be made along lines that would be fair and equitable to both interests concerned. Furthermore, he would not consent unless he was assured that seemly and satisfactory provision would be made for the proper support of each bishop. During the convention the Washington endowment committee would report that they advancement of its work that they were all downent committee would report that they had succeeded in raising a sufficient amount to guarantee the proper support of a bishop for the new diocese it the division be made. As to Baltimore he was not so clear, but he felt sure that a satisfactory report would be made.

Misunderstanding Explained. The bishop said that he had been rathe misunderstood in the matter of the conditions which he had laid down. He had insisted that an equitable division be provided for -not an equal division. Neither had he said that endowments were necessary so large no assessments would have to be crease in the assessments would be nec

The bishop closed his address after reiterating the statement that it was in his belief that the interests of the church would be enhanced, and not as a measure of relief for the bishop, that he advocated the division of the old diocese of Maryland.
The bishop said: "But earnestly as I still think division advisable, I cannot count the action of last year as irrevocable. Now action of last year as irrevocable. New light may have come to some. New light ought to have come to us all. It may be that a careful and thorough reconsideration may only the more strongly confirm our former convictions. If those views were right, they will stand all the light that can be thrown uron them and will be the surery right, they will stand all the light that can be thrown upon them, and will be the surer for it. What we all seek is the real strength and welfare of the church; its greater power and effectiveness as Christ's Instrument and servant in perpetuating and spreading His blessings for mankind. Let us seek that in our thoughts and d'scussion. Let us seek that in our votes, and above all seek it in our prayers, that God, the Holy Ghost, may lead us into the right, may save us from error, ignorance and prejudice save us from error, ignorance and prejudice and help us to choose and to do what He

At the conclusion of the bishop's addres At the conclusion of the bishop's address a contribution was taken up for the benefit of the diocesan mission fund, and then the bishop administered the sacrament of holy communion to all such as desired to partake. The religious service closed with the singing of a recessional hymn.

The Afternoon Session.

The report of the committee from Baltimore to raise funds for episcopate support was to the effect that it had been deemed inadvisable to canvass for funds until there was an improvement in the times and until the Washington committee had done enough to insure ultimate success. A legacy of about $100,000 had been left to the diocese, and the committee had de-cided to make no further effort until the terms of that legacy had been learned. The Washington Committee Report.

Rev. Dr. McKim read the report of the ommittee representing Washington. He said that it had been estimated that $5,000 would be needed for the bishop's salary, $1,200 for house rent, and $423 for other ex-

To meet in part this annual expenditure of $6,623 for the support of the proposed diocese, your committee considered that they could rely upon the following revenues: From parochial assessments, $2,520; from one-half of revenue of Episcopal fund voted by the convention in 1894, $388; from the part cent on one-third of accumulating voted by the convention in 1894, $588; from 5 per cent on one-third of accumulating Episcopal fund, $116. Total, $3,224.

The problem before us, therefore, was to raise an additional annual revenue of $3,339.

Of this amount we were of opinion that $160 could be raised by readjusting the parochial assessments, so as to redress some evident inequalities in the existing scales. Having this in view, it remained to provide an additional endowment sufficient to yield, say, $3,000 per annum.

The Plan Adopted.

It is proper to explain that, in order to attain an end which seemed in these times of stringency almost unattainable, the committee adopted the plan of asking for subscriptions by annual installments, so that the total amount subscribed will not be paid in until the summer of 1899. In-

stated.
From interest on $48,313 raised by this committee, partly 6 per cent, partly at 5 per cent, in the year 1896.
From annual parochial pledges From voluntary additional annual assessment made by one of our parishes. 275 00

The committee is of opinion that this deficiency of $314.72 in annual revenue will readily be made up upon the organization of the new diocese.

Resolutions Submitted. The committee in closing submit to the convention the following preamble and resolutions: Whereas, at the last annual convention of the diocese, after full discussion upon the elaborate report of the committee of seven, appointed in 1893, it was resolved

"that it is the sense of this convention that it is advisable to divide the diocese of that it is advisable to divide the diocese of Maryland into two dioceses;" and, whereas, it was further resolved that the District of Columbia, together with the counties of Prince George's, Montgomery, St. Mary's and Charles, should constitute the territory of the new diocese; and, whereas, there has been secured a suitable provision for the support of the episcopate in the proposed new diocese.

has been secured a suitable provision for the support of the episcopate in the proposed new diocese:

Therefore, be it Resolved, 1. That the convention of the diocese of Maryland hereby ratifies its action above recited, and directs the appointment of a committee (to consist of its delegates to the next general convention), which, so soon as it shall have been duly notified by the bishop of the diocese of his consent to such division, shall prepare the necessary memorial and certificates, to be prosented to said general convention in October next, asking its consent to such division; and that in the said memorial it shall be stated that this convention declares that the diocese of Washington shall be the new diocese.

Resolved, II. That a committee of three clergymen and three laymen from the territory of the proposed new diocese, and the same number of clergymen and laymen from the other part of the diocese, be appointed to consider and report at the earliest moment what proportion should be adopted in the division of any legacles to which the convention of the diocese of Maryland may have become entitled by the terms of any will, or codicil thereto (the testator being deceased), between January 1, 1894, and May 1, 1895.

A Great Crowd Gives Them a Send

WHAT COACH COURTNEY SAYS

NEW YORK, May 29 .- Cornell University's eight, which will compete in the Henley regatta, sailed for England today on board the American Line steamer Paris A great crowd went upon the steamer to bid the oarsmen good-bye. Among the early arrivals at the dock were ex-Governor Alonzo B. Cornell and Mrs. Cornell. The latter carried a big American flag at tached to a long mahogany pole, and when she reached the cabin gang-plank she cried: "I want to see my boys, for they are dear

The crew and their companions were soon presented to their distinguished vis-itor, and to the lapel of each of their jackets Mrs. Cornell pinned a diminutive Amer ican flag, fastened with a silver pin, and ican flag, fastened with a silver pin, and on each the donor, in her own handwriting, had placed the words "Good luck to the boys of Cornell." She delivered a short address to them and prophesied that they would come back with the colors of their college flying triumphantly.

Courtney, the coach, on being asked his opinion of the crew's chances, said: "I carnot say. The crew that wins that race at Henley would come near winning anything there is to be rowed in Europe and America. The tou; hest nut we will have to crack is the Leander eight, composed this year, I believe, of six Oxford and two Cambridge 'Varsity oars. If we beat them the eagle will certainly have a right to scream." In answer to a question as to what kind

In answer to a question as to what kind of discipline would be maintained over the crew while on board the Paris, Courtney said: "Any one who thinks that these young gentlemen and I are going across the ocean on a picnic is mightily mistaken. The boys will, when on sea, be under as strict rules as on land. Their main exercise, I fancy, will be plenty of walking, and not much else. Anyhow, a week's rest won't do them a bit of harm."

Immediately on reaching England the boys will go into quarters to prepare for the contest. They take with them two paper boats, weighing 230 pounds each, sixty feet long and twenty-four inches beam. The steamer W. G. Egerton, loaded with friends of the young collegians, accompanied the Paris down the bay and past the Narrows.

The makeup of the crew is as follows:

If a paper receives credit for having a larger circulation than it really enjoys, a reason exists for withholding from the advertiser the actual circulation figures and mystifying customers with "about" and "approximately." The Star, however, has a circulation that it is proud of and each Saturday prints a detailed sworn statement of its actual circulation, giving the advertiser what by business ethics he is plainly entitled to -- a guarantee of that which he is buying. The advertiser in The Star is not asked to "trade jackknives, sight unseen." He knows exactly what he is paying for. The Star is alone among Washington newspapers in making public announcement of its circulation figures. Last week the daily average was 33,031 copies.

A HEBREW CONFIRMATION.

Simple but Impressive Services at the Eighth Street Temple.

Simple but most impressive were the exercises attending the confirmation of eleven boys and girls at the Temple of Washington Hebrew Congregation this morning. It was the holiday of the Pentecost, and as is customary confirmations are made on this day. The temple was crowded with the clends and relatives of the confirm ants. The altar was tastefully decorated with festoons of smilax and asparagus, with red and white carnations, caught gracefully here and there. Rabbi Stern officiated, as sisted by Henry King, jr., president, and M. Goldsmith, vice president.

In a sweet voice full of pathos she prayed God to bless and preserve them. Hilda Jacobi delivered the floral prayer, and at its conclusion, the ark, in which is kept the sacred scroll, was festooned with flowers. Belle Goldman advanced some views on the Bible, and Joseph Bendheim spoke of divine worship. "The Mainspring of Virtue" was the theme Miriam Behrends selected, and her words were well chosen. She maintained that a kind and noble heart is the mainspring of all virtue.

Eugene Luchs spoke of "The Jew and His Country," and after paying a noble tribute to his race, spoke in patriotic terms of America and the American Jew. Israel Baumgarten contributed an essay entitled "Why We Remain Jews." and Jacob Spandau told what was expected after confirmation. May Sackerman offered a prayer, and Theresa Salomon delivered the closing prayer. During the exercises Rabbi Stern questioned the confirmants on the chatecism, and they all showed a thorough knowledge of their religion.

Rabbi Stern then addressed the confirmants. He told them it was through the children that Judaism could live. They were the sureties of the religion, and he impressed them to guard well their sacred trust. After being confirmed, the children received the blessings of their parents and the congratulations of their friends.

While there were no confirmations at Adas Israel Synagogue, the feast of the Pentecot was fittingly celebrated. Rabbi Samuels officiated, and conducted the services according to the Torah. This is the orthodox synagogue, and the feast will continue for two days.

auctioneers, charged with violating the police regulations in having a bell sounded for the purpose of advertising a sale. Policeman Hunt of the first precinc brought the charge several days ago, as published in The Star at the time, and counsel for the defendants moved the court to quash the information, on the grounds to quash the information, on the grounds that the law legalizing the business and requiring those engaged in it to take out licenses also required the ringing of the bell. During the course of the argument, counsel said he thought that the failure of an auctioneer to ring a bell as provided in the law might invalidate a forced sale.

Judge Kimball considered the matter fully, and today granted the motion to quash. This settles the question and determines that the law under which the license was granted, and which also deals with the question of the ringing of the bell, has not been repealed. The regulation of the Commissioners, the court held, was an unreasonable one so far as it applies to auctioneers.

The Rifle Association Will Organize

Complete organization of the National Rifle Association is, if possible, to be arranged for this evening at a public meetirg, which is to be held in the lecture room at the National Guard Armory on L street Membership in the association is open to soldiers and civilians. A program has been soldiers and civilians. A program has been outlined which promises weekly "shoots" throughout the entire year, thus affording to rifle shots who are not members of the National Guard opportunities for indulgence in their favorite sport not now in existence. For several years past non-military rifle chooting in the District of Columbia has been impossible, because there was no range upon which to practice. Now pergulations have been concluded by which was no range upon which to practice. Now negotiations have been concluded by which the association will have the use of the National Guard range, which is being equipped near Magruder station, on the Baltimore and Potomac road, so speedy revival of interest is expected.

PITTSBURG'S AMBITION

Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania is in the city. He is preparing his home on New Hampshire avenue in order to vacate it for the summer, and in the early part of next week will leave the city with his family. Mr. Dalzell, since Congress adjourned, has been much in Pittsburg. "I have read Senator Sherman's speech though in a superficial way," said Mr. Dalzell to a Star reporter this afternoon. "It seems to me that it indicates that the republican party is going to stand fast by its old time doctrines, while it is thoroughly and conscientiously in favor of bimetallism if that can be secured on a basis that will be honest. It is opposed to free coinage of silver at the present ratio, under the evicting electrostates. existing circumstances."

"Do you think that Senator Sherman's expressions will meet with the approval of the republican party throughout the coun-try?" the reporter asked. Sentiment on the Silver Question.

"I think they will. I do not think there is any sentiment in Pennsylvania that amounts to anything at all in favor of free coinage of silver, as we understand it, at

"I think Pensylvania may be counted upon as solid for the republican doctrine, as it has been announced in the party's platform, and as I understand it to be today in favor of bimetallism, if we can secure an international agreement. That will be made possible. There is no considerable number of Pennsylvania republicans who believe that this country could alone establish free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1.

"There may be a few here and there, perhaps, just as there were during the days of the greenback craze a few greenback republicans, but the number is very insignificant, and they hold no power in Pennsylvania.

"I think the meeting in Pennsylvania of republican leaders showed the sentiment of the state on the silver question. Pennsylvania is not greatly interested in the silver agitation, the dominant issue in that state being the tariff, and on that the form, and as I understand it to be today in silver agitation, the dominant issue in that state being the tariff, and on that the republican party is a unit, of course.

"The tariff will be an issue in the next Congress, as it will be absolutely necessary for us to devise some method to raise revenue to meet daily expenditures. I do not look for any effort in the next Congress toward a general revision of the tariff for toward a general revision of the tariff, for the reason that any revision on republican lines would not meet with the approval of the executive. On what lines an increase of the revenue can be secured it is not easy to predict now.

"The statistics of the Treasury Department should show what the present tarin is accomplishing, and indicate any especially weak places in the law. With such information at hand it can readily be seen where higher duties are most necessary. Of course, there are members who advocate an increase of tax along the lines of internal revenue, for instance, an increased ternal revenue, for instance, an increased tax on beer, but I do not believe that any-body can predict at this time what the next Congress will do.

"The course adopted will depend largely upon the conditions existing at that time."

"Will Pennsylvania put forward a candidate for the presidency?"

Pittsburg Wants the Convention. "It is barely possible that the republicans of Pennsylvania will present a candidate for the nomination at the national convention, but I think it is too far off to talk about that.

convention, but I think it is too far off to a talk about that.

"It is a fortunate thing for the republican party that it has such a large number of men who are capable of taking the presidency and who may be considered as candidates. When you look around on the other side—at the democratic party—and corsider that there does not seem to be any one in particular upon whom the public mind centers, it seems as though the republican party had a monopoly of presidential candidates.

"By the way, Pittsburg is very anxious to have the next national convention meet within her borders. Our people have worked up the situation vigorously, and are bent on securing the convention. There are any number of reasons why they should have it. In the first place, we have the ability to thoroughly care for the people who would come to the convention. Then Pittsburg is the birthplace of the republican party.

"The first convention that party ever held was held at Lafayette Hall, Pittsburg. Pittsburg is easily accessible from the east and west, and it is the county seat for that county which has given the largest republican majority for the republican ticket of all the counties in the United States. Pennsylvania, by reason of its intense loyalty to the republican party, gets nothing from the national conventions by way of office, and it seems that we ought to have the poor bone of a national convention.

"There has teen a very decided expression ought to have the poor bone of a national convention.

"There has been a very decided expression on this matter by the business men and politicians. Telegrams have been sent to members of the republican national committee asking for their support of Pittsburg as the place for holding the convention. A good many favorable repulse have tion. A good many favorable replies have been received to these telegrams, but of course most of the committeemen were non-committal."

A Conference of the Delegates From

A meeting was held last evening at the Church of the Epiphany of the clerical and lay delegates to the diocesan convention from Washington and from Charles, St. Mary's, Prince George's and Montgomery counties, Maryland. This is the territory from which it is pro-posed to constitute the new diocese of Washington, and the meeting was held to outline and discuss the position which these delegates would take on the question of division. Rev. Dr. John H. Elliott, rec of division. Rev. Dr. John H. The resolutions were adopted after considerable resolutions were adopted after considerable discussion, and it was voted to support them in convention. This was adopted.

GENERAL MARKET REPORTS

Special Dispatch to The Evening Star.

NEW YORK, May 29.-Opening prices this morning were steady around last night's closing figures, and subsequently became irregular under narrow and, in the main, professional trading.

The London market was dull and slightly lower, the approaching holiday season at that center being responsible for a marked falling off in the volume of busi-

The government weather reports failed to confirm yesterday's rumors of damage by frost, and some covering of short sales ensued. The stocks most conspicuous in the decline were the subjects of fractional gains in consequence of this effort to recover yesterday's sales. It is practically impossible to estimate, with any degree of accuracy, the exact extent of the damage to growing crops resulting from the sudden fall in temperature throughout the agricultural districts.

The best opinion, however, seems to be that after all of the reports prepared for speculative purposes have been subjected to more deliberate examination an average crop at least will be found to be within the range of probability.

The buying of the Granger shares, while unimportant in volume, indicated a marked hesitancy on the part of traders to stay short of them at the present level. Tenressee Coal and Iron sold off on early trading for a decline of 15-8 per cent.

The extent of the recent continuous advance in this property fulls with the statement of the recent continuous advance in this property fulls. The extent of the recent continuous advance in this property fully justifies the decline and in no way impairs the value of previous assurances that higher prices are to be expected in the very near future. Pacific Mail sold down on realizing sales, but the decline is not likely to remain per-but the decline is not likely to remain permanent.

In the industrial list Sugar was the feature at an advance of 15-8 per cent. The room has sold this stock during the week on the presumption that the destruction of the small fruit crop would seriously reduce anticipated profits. As previously stated, it is altogether improbable that the earnings of this company will fall below the amount necessary to continue present dividends at least.

American Tobacco was fairly active and decidedly irregular, selling down 1 per cent to 114 during the first hour, and subsequently rallying to 115 3-4 on purchases said to represent both accounts. The balance of this group was steady around first prices and attracted little attention.

During the afternoon the market was

During the afternoon the market was chiefly influenced by the evening up of traders' contracts over tomorrow's holiday. Should London come into the market as a purchaser of our securities next week the advance will be resumed and will probably ably extend beyond the best figures ably extend beyond the best figures thus far recorded.

The reactionists will continue to clamor for lower prices, citing the average prices of a few months ago in justification of their arguments, but to conservative operators it will likely occur that the prices previously ruling were much too low to be consistent with improved conditions and

It is therefore likely that the interrup-tion to the advance may continue briefly, but no important decline will materialize as the product of conditions now in force.
